I had the chance to interview my grandma, Rosemary Smith, about her mother who traveled to America in 1895 from Germany. Her family made the trip here because they lived in a very poor village and her husband wanted to try and find a better job in our country. She remembers the ride in the ship here as being very hot and crowded. They have a few things that remind them of Germany including some special Christmas ornaments and food (sauerkraut and perogies).
